

Economy

I am working in Congress to ease the problems families across our country are facing — a crisis in the housing market, stagnant wages, and skyrocketing prices of basic consumer goods like food and gasoline. Our country's economic security depends on it. At the same time, Congress must implement fiscally responsible, pro-growth policies that encourage economic competitiveness. As the Chair of the New Democrat Coalition, I am committed to ensuring the U.S. remains a leader in today's globalized world. I believe in implementing policies that encourage investment in innovative technologies that make our economy more productive; an education agenda that trains young Americans in math, science, and engineering so that they can compete for 21st century jobs; and forward-thinking trade policies that open markets for U.S. businesses, farmers, and workers.
